WELCOME

Welcome to Seaton's of Sailortown, a pub inspired by the legendary Molly Seaton who embodied the spirit of Belfast's grit and warmth. Molly was no ordinary soul; she was a fiercely independent woman and here, we honour her legacy with a place as vibrant and authentic as Molly was. Grab a seat, and let's keep her spirit alive, one pint at a time.

Nicknamed "Big Molly" due to her tall stature and powerful play, Seaton was one of the most dominant and celebrated players of her time. Born in Dandy Street in 1905, she grew up in a working-class neighbourhood in North Belfast and began working in the city's linen mills.

Despite societal resistance to women's football, she thrived, often playing alongside men and captaining the Ireland women's team in the 1920s and 1930s. Seaton gained fame for her hard tackling and strong presence on the pitch, playing for several teams, including Castle Rovers, a team she helped form. She was known for her powerful tackles and even played in men's matches—an impressive feat for a woman at the time.

She also played for Rutherglen Ladies during their groundbreaking tour of Britain and Ireland, becoming their top goal scorer. Her standout performance included scoring seven goals in a single match in Dublin in front of 12,000 spectators.

Seaton's fame extended beyond football; she had her own agent, Josie Farrell, who helped her secure public appearances and even advertisements. Despite facing criticism for her "masculine" appearance, she remained a beloved figure in Belfast, where she was frequently seen in the local pubs of Sailortown. After her football career, she continued to support women's football through refereeing and organising matches.

Molly passed away in 1974, but her contributions to women's football were rediscovered in recent years, cementing her legacy as one of the game's early trailblazers in Ireland.

Let's celebrate a true local icon who made her mark both on and off the pitch. Let's raise a glass 'To Molly' ✨ A PIONEERING SPIRIT IN EVERY CORNER ✨
